

December Event

Join us December 9 in Person!

Lessons Learned (from the ‘young’ guy with all the grey hair)

With a records management consulting career spanning over three decades, Steve Goodfellow will share with you lessons learned while working with distinguished firms such as IBM, Corning, Xerox, HP, to government agencies from the CIA to hundreds of state and local governments.

Discussing the good, the not so good and maybe some we shouldn't talk about, Steve will share his insights - as well as some of his screwups you'll want to avoid – while working within your own records management program.

About the Speaker Steve Goodfellow

From his first ‘real’ job selling dedicated word processors and six-figure document scanners, to leaving his job as a Corporate Product Manager to start his current firm in 1989, Steve has seen – and learned a lot. As president of Access Systems Consulting, Steve is focused on improving the way organizations manage their records and information.

Steve is a Certified Records Manager, a Certified Document Imaging Architect, a recipient of the AIIM Laureate of Information Technology designation, former adjunct professor at Syracuse University, written for many industry publications, and is a contributing author of the book: Managing Electronic Records.
